LEMOORE, Calif. – Local fan favorite Casey “The Underdog” Olson met WEC champion Urijah Faber’s stablemate Tito Jones in a lightweight contest. Jones came out fast and former Fresno State wrestler Olson scrambled to get his timing down for a takedown. Jones kept Olson off balance with sidekicks and was even able to get Olson down to the mat, but was not able to really capitalize on it.

Olson took a few good shots from Jones as he was looking for the takedown. Olson was finally able to score the takedown towards the end of round two, but didn’t net much damage. Grounding Jones again in the third round, Olson earned a unanimous decision with score of 29-28, much to the delight of his trainers Chuck Liddell, John Hackleman [and Antonio Banuelos].
