

WEC 18: Unfinished Business

Jan. 13, 2006
by Loretta Hunt

In other lightweight action, Lion's Den newbie Joe Martin made a much more lasting impression than his last WEC appearance against triangle choke king Cole Escovedo. This time around, Martin was able to show a bit of his slick ground game with some armbar attempts and expert positioning underneath Casey "The Underdog" Olson.

Martin did exactly what he was supposed to underneath wrestler Olson (who scored his takedowns easily), spinning off the fence and tying up his aggressor to prevent Olson from scoring much damage.

However, it still wasn't enough for Martin as the bout went into its second set. Catching Martin midair as he attempted to surprise him with a flying knee, Olson again grounded the Lion's Den fighter, peppering him with body and head shots.

Both exhausted going into round three, Casey "The Underdog" Olson's takedowns proved too much... and the Pit/Pacific Martial Arts upstart was awarded the unanimous decision.

www.fullcontactfighter.com

